

physicians, but we can not justify the author in his facetious and flippant manner of telling unnecessary stories and of illuminating some pages with headlines of questionable wit. It is regrettable that an author whose general attitude is so evidently wholesome should thus mar his book. The publisher advertises that the book "reads like a novel," which, we submit, is hardly necessary in such a work.

CLINICAL BACTERIOLOGY AND HEMATOLOGY FOR PRACTITIONERS. By W. D. Emery, M.D., B.Sc., Clinical Pathologist to King's College Hospital and Pathologist to the Children's Hospital, Paddington Green. Cloth. Pp. 240. Price, $2.00. Philadelphia: P. Blakiston's Son & Co., 1906.

The present edition of this work contains many improvements over the previous edition. More space is given to the bacteriologic examination of materials from special parts of the body and to the examination of blood, especially with reference to the diagnosis of disease. The technical part of the work has been rewritten to include descriptions of new methods and new apparatus.

HYGIENE OF PREGNANCY. By W. B. Jennings, Ph. B., M.D., Attending Physician (O.P.D.), St. Mary's Free Hospital for Children. Flexible Leather. Pp. 48. New York: Medical Review of Reviews.

This monograph is intended for the use of nurses and expectant mothers. The language is simple and free from technical terms.

Marriages

JOSIAH CALVIN McCracken, M.D., Canton, China, to Miss Ellen Newpher of Cleveland, Ohio, September 12.

DAVID HENRY FITZGERALD, M.D., Fond du Lac, Wis., to Miss Lillian Virginia Gannon of Chicago, October 3.

J. H. DUNCAN, M.D., Killbuck, Ohio, to Miss Alberta Esther Dugan of Mechanic Township, September 19.

ANDREW MOYNIHAN, M.D., Sauk Center, Minn., to Miss Emma Collins of St. Paul, September 25.

HARRY R. BROWN, M.D., Chillicothe, Ohio, October 3.

Deaths

Eduardo Andrade, M.D. University of Georgetown, Medical Department, Washington, D. C., 1894; a member of the American Medical Association; bacteriologist of the State Board of Health of Florida; a member of the Duval County (Fla.) Medical Society, and one of the most brilliant and popular young practitioners of Jacksonville, Fla., died suddenly in New York City September 20, aged 33. The State Health Officer of Florida pays the following tribute to the memory of Dr. Andrade: "Words can not convey nor can human tongue express the grief which the State Board of Health feels in the loss of its talented associate, who, although young in years, nevertheless possessed the mental qualities of an accomplished and polished scholar and scientist, and typified in every act of life all the attributes of a Christian gentleman." The Jacksonville Board of Trade and the Duval County Medical Society appointed special committees to attend the funeral.

William K. Otis, M.D. College of Physicians and Surgeons in the City of New York, 1885; a member of the American Association of Genitourinary Surgeons, American Urological Association, New York Academy of Medicine, St. Luke's Alumni Association; Hospital Graduates Club; New York County Medical Society and Medical Association of the City of Greater New York; professor of genitourinary diseases in the New York School of Clinical Medicine; attending surgeon to St. Mark's Hospital and the West Side German Dispensary; consulting surgeon to the City Hospital and the Throat and Nose Hospital, died suddenly at his home in New York City, September 22, from pneumonia, aged 36.

Walter Clarke Jackson, M.D. Department of Medicine of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, 1852; a member of the Alabama State Medical Association before the Civil War, one of the reorganizers of the association in 1868, and for several years its treasurer; once president of the Medical and Surgical Society of Montgomery; one of the ten physicians who in 1872 organized the Social Medical Club in Montgomery, died at his home in Montgomery, September 22, after an illness of only three days, aged 79.

Albert R. Ong, M.D. Columbus (Ohio) Medical College, 1877, a member of the American Medical Association, one of the most prominent physicians of Martins Ferry, Ohio; for a number of years professor of mathematics and astronomy and vice-president of Richmond College; a member of the Board of Pension Commissioners and chief of the Volunteer Fire Department of Martins Ferry, died suddenly at his home in that city, September 22, from acute gastritis, aged 58.

Francis Perley Taylor, M.D. Pennsylvania Medical College, Philadelphia, 1857, L.R.C.P., Edinburgh, 1865, and F.R.C.P., Edinburgh, 1871; one of the founders and a constant patron of the Prince Edward Island Hospital, and for many years a member of the Charlottetown Board of Education; one of the most prominent and beloved practitioners of Prince Edward Island, died at his home in Charlottetown, September 17, after an illness of only half an hour.

Andrew Fine, M.D. Toland Medical College, San Francisco, 1866; one of the best known practitioners of Oakland, Cal.; for 24 years a member of the California State Board of Pension Examiners; consulting physician to the Home for the Adult Blind, and for several terms a member of the Board of Education of Oakland, died at the home of his son in that city, September 20, after a long illness, aged 63.

John M. Buckingham, M.D. Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, 1852; a member of the American Medical Association, Ohio State Medical Association, Southwestern Ohio Medical Society and Clark County Medical Society; a member of the staff of the Springfield City Hospital, and health officer of Springfield, Ohio, died suddenly in that city, September 27.

Thomas H. Helsby, M.D. University of Maryland School of Medicine, Baltimore, 1859; surgeon in the Fifth Army Corps during the Civil War, and for 30 years thereafter a practitioner in Williamsport, Pa., died at his home in Baltimore, September 26, aged 71.

Thomas F. M. Phelan, M.D. Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York City, 1882; city physician of Orange, N. J., in 1891, and health officer, died from general paresis, at a sanitarium in Worcester, Mass., September 11, after an illness of several years.

William B. Foster, M.D. Medical Department of the University of Louisiana, New Orleans, 1850; one of the oldest and most highly respected physicians of Hope, Ark., died September 14, at a sanitarium in Texarkana, after a surgical operation, aged 84.

Charles E. C. Beach, M.D. Fort Wayne (Ind.) College of Medicine, 1905; interne at Hope Hospital, Fort Wayne, in 1903 and 1904, died at his home in Coesse, Ind., September 20, from cerebral congestion, after a short illness, aged 27.

George S. Rittenhouse, M.D. Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, 1880, a member of the Cecil County Medical Society, died at his home in North East, Md., September 22, from tuberculosis, after a lingering illness, aged 49.

Samuel Wesley Lippincott, M.D. Department of Medicine of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, 1897, of Philadelphia, died at the University Hospital, September 22, from hemorrhage due to gastric ulcer, aged 36.

William D. Kerr (Years of Practice, W. Va.), for forty years a practitioner of that state, while making a professional call near his home at Huntington, Dec. 13, 1905, was struck by a railway train and instantly killed.

Thomas C. Dodson, M.D. New York University, New York City, 1849, of Mount Vernon, Texas, died suddenly September 18, at the home of his daughter in Tishomingo, I. T., from heart disease, aged 78.

Daniel M. Skinner, M.D. New York University, New York City, 1858; a surgeon in the Navy during the Civil War, died at his home in Belleville, N. J., September 26, from cerebral hemorrhage, aged 71.

G. W. Wilson, M.D. University of Nashville, Medical Department, 1902, of Westmoreland, Tenn., died at a hospital in Nashville, September 15, five days after an operation for appendicitis, aged 43.

Ambrose H. Martin, M.D. Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, 1885; for a number of years a practitioner of Pendleton, Ore., died in Portland, Ore., September 18, after a surgical operation.

Higgins C. Smith, M.D. Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York City, 1869, died at his home in Broadwell, Ky., September 17, from disease of the stomach, after a long illness, aged 70.